Sailroad Building.

The year 1881 closed with 104,813 miles of railroad in operation in the United States; 1882 closed with 113,329 miles. The gain is 11,591 miles, the greatest the country has ever seen. Last year's construction is even further in advance of that of any other year than would seem by the record Toe increased mileage in 1881 is placed at 11,142. The actual number of miles constructed in that year was 9,358, the differ ence representing the hitherto unreported construction, which had to be let in some where and is properly placed in the grand

The enormous growth of this most important of industries-without which agriculture and manufactures would be where they were half a century ago-is not to be known that a large part of this construc-tion takes place where it is not needed. New lines are built parallel to old ones not invariably because they are needed to accommodate the traffic, or to bring down exorbitant rates, but often with no other purpose than to force established lines to buy them. This means so much money put where it is not needed, and in the generai account it makes little difference whose money it is.

Then there are roads built to sell to investors, to people not always the shrewdest, who have a little money which they are willing to put in railroad securities in the hope of drawing fair returns. The promoters unload and make money out of the unsuspecting. The sale of the road pays, though its profitable operation may be long delayed. Purchasers of shares do not always stop to think that they are buying part of the property; that somebody is buying more; and that back of it all may be shrewd business men jobbing out the whole thing in small lots, having built to sell and not to

way to ascertain the exact cost of construction, but the promotors know to a dollar. The item of liabilities is instructive on this point. At the close of 1882 the total liabilities were $6,895,664,359; that is, $61,342 on every mile. In 1861 the liability per mile was $57,730; in 1880 $58,949. It will be seen that from 1880 to 1881 there was a slight decrease, and the hope was held out that the next year, by reason of constantly improving methods of construction and more favorable showing. On the contrary 1852 shows a very decided relapse. Of course the figures do not represent actual increase. In the past three years the nominal increase in expenditures has ex-ceeded the cash increase ($1,050,000,000) by $973,646,842, but the paper has gone out for it all and somebody is loaded up with it. A few pertinent figures will be found

39.607 In three years there has been a cor erable falling off in net earnings. This means that stockholders are not faring so well; and since there has not been a corresponding decrease in gross earnings, appears that some one else is faring better than the stockholders. For the stockholders each year is worse than the year before. If they had been able to buy in at a figure nearer cost price their returns would make be greater than that caused by the Univer a better showing. In four years nearly 40,000 miles of road have been built, for which stockholders have paid about $2,400,-000,000 more than double the cost of con-

It does not need to be said that some body has been taken in. This is a very profitable business. It will go on while people are foolish enough to "buy a pig in a poke;" and until the public learns wisdom and pulls its purse strings wild-cat railroad building will continue. The coun try is for from being supplied with all the railroad facilities it needs; but under the present system, fostered by the inducement of rapid and dishonest gain, the new construction is not always well placed. West Virginia, for example, needs more railroads and would pay a fair return for them. We have coal, iron, timber, manufactured and agricultural products to ship, and we should have more of them if we could get them to market. West Virginia is not yet in the great railroad building area, and is not thought to look so well in the well-printed prospectuses. Daylight is dawning; we are making headway slowly, and our turn will come.

A copper tablet to be placed in the corner stone of the Garfield monument in San Francisco bears an inscripton reading in part: "To the memory of James Abram Garfield, who faithfully served his country on the battlefield, in Congress and as President of the United States of America. Born Nov. 19, A. D. 1830. Died Sept. 19, A. D. 1831, from wounds received at the hands of an assassin. "It's a very stormy season, and we expect to be sea-sick, and we druther go en a boat where the captain is a religious man."

"Well, that's all right," he replied. "We've got one very religious captain on our line, and his boat sails to-night."

"Can we go down and see him?"

"Oh, yes. Keep right down the street until you see the boat."

The couple walked on and finally boarded the steamer. The captain and all hands were busy with the carge, but the old folks walked up to him and the woman said:

id: "Captain you have been recor to us as a religious man."

"The —— I have!" he promptly growled.

They looked at each other with consternation depicted in their faces, and then the old man said:

"Captain, what church do you belong

"See here?" roared the official, "if you've come to bleed me for some charity, or want me to sign a petition or expect this boat to carry a lot of deadheads up the fake, I won't s'and it! We'll go by this boat, and if he don't swear any harder than he did to us mebbe Providence will be him severa through on the up-trip and let him squeeze through on the up-trip and sink him when he comes down!"

Exchange.

Very few people who cry "Hip, hip Hurrah!" with such gusto know anything about the origin of the words. During the times of the crusades the chivalry of Europe was roused to arms by the inflammatory appeals of Peter the Hermit, who always displayed a banner emblazoned with the following letters: H. E. P., the initials of the Latin words Hierosolymo est perdita, or Jerusalem is destroyed. The people who were not acquainted with Latin pronounced the letters as a word—hep, and whenever they chanced to meet a poor Jew they raised the cry, "Hep, hep, hurra!" and the chances were greatly in favor of the Jew's feeling the point of their swords.

Exchange.
Tom Thumb died comparatively young for a dwarf. Richard Gibson, miniature painter and court dwarf to Charles I, lived to be seventy-five: Sir Geoffrey Hudson, dwarf and diplomatist to Charles II, expired at sixty-three, and the little gentleman's span of life was shortened by his incarceration, on suspicion of connivance in the Popish plot, in the gatehouse at Westminster, where he died. The far iamed Polish dwarf, Count Borulawski, for whom George IV provided, died also at an advanced age. Dwarfs are better constituted, so Barnum says, than giants, both mentally and physically.

The latest expose of Bourbon mismanage ment in this State has produced a sensation in the Democratic ranks which bids fair to sity embroglio. Let the inquiry be made; let the public bave all the facts and the guilty parties be brought to justice. Turn the rascals out!"

The Annamite Tuduc, just deceased, was was a curiosity among emperors. The two chief institutions of his palace were his harem and his kitchen. He was an old man, and only allowed his sacred face to be seen by mandarins of high rank. His principal meal consisted of newer fewer than twenty courses, among which was his favorite delicacy of roast monkey. He frequently received a fatted ape from his subjects as a present, and nothing was more acceptable. Among other strange food served up at his table were the humps of camels, the fins of sharks, varieties of snails, and a species of red worms. The latter are eaten alive. His manner of daily life was said to be more luxurious than that of his over lord, the Emperor of Chins.
